

Father with a code in his hands

Father — not just a name, but a system,

where every step is an algorithm for life.

He reviews BIOS settings in peace,

while others are still looking for a restart within themselves.

He sees a problem as an opportunity to grow,

not as a mistake to be erased from the window.

With words that sound like a command line,

he connects people — like a network connection.

His hands — not only friends of the keyboard,

but also the shoulder on which the day rests.

And you, Kaspars, are his continuation,

in poetry, games, memories — like a living program.